Bingham Young University's spring varsity basketball team completed the first series of games in Seoul and Korea in their 28-game junket in the Far East.

The Cougars won six out of 11 games played in Seoul and the best competition Korea offered. The lone defeat came to the Korean National team,

TOKYO STOP
A basketball-playing American team stopped in Tokyo on their way to Seoul and are scheduled for a five-game series in Manila next.

After playing two games in Seoul, Coach Stan Watts arranged for touring group to visit the demilitarized zone (DMZ) and Pusan, the South Korean village where the truce ending the Korean fighting was signed.

BYU visitors toured the bases in the DMZ last and sat at the negotiation tables.

ENTHUSIASTIC FANS
For basketball in Korea, the tour party enjoyed both the excitement and the enthusiastic Korean fans. More than 34,000 attended the seven games in Seoul. All the games were played in Seoul's Cheong Chung Gymnasium. Each game was covered highly by the Korean Times which is printed in English. Two sessions broadcast each game, the international rules being caught the fancy of the Korean players. The game is rough and the penalty of the foul is a kick-out, roughness, according to reports from the tour. The Culture office also presented two assemblies — a Variety Show and the Polynesian Dancers.

Student body activity this summer has provided students of Brigham Young University a varied program of social, cultural, and academic events.

Ron Gossling, student president, headed the student office as president, and was assisted by Thayne O'Brien and Dick McDermott, executive assistants, and executive secretary Karen Welch.

SOCIAL EVENTS

The president's office sponsored the 24th of July Float and coordinated student body activities of the summer program.

Vice president of Finance Joe Watson was responsible for converting all accounting and controlling procedures to an IBM system, which provided a weekly budget.

In the Academics Office, a College Bowl was open to all students and started with the Vice Presidents against the Advisors. There were four book reviews, "Death of a President," "Joseph Smith the Transistor," "Fascinating Womanhood," and "A Psychologist Looks at Religion." Dance standards, Traffic violations, and Purpose of the Y were topics of discussion in Free Forum. Grant Richards was vice president of academics.

SOCIAL EVENTS

Social Office activities included BYU Lagoon Day, Western Barn Dance, Chicken Fry, Summer Formal, Summer End Dance with Four Freshmen in concert, games, room dances, outdoor movies, and mat dances. Ron Gossling directed this office as vice president.

Pat Patterson worked as vice president of Student Relations which was responsible for organizing leadership and orientation at the beginning of the summer. Also sponsored by the Student Relations was a homecoming.

YOUNG WRESTLERS

Vice president of Culture, Reed Coleman, was in charge of the Y activities and the popularity of the football and basketball tournaments, according to reports from the tour. HOORAY! It's all over! Today marks the end of the 1967 Summer School Session at BYU. Most students will disperse to various parts of the country, where they will enjoy a three-week vacation before school begins in the fall. Pictured above are six-month-old twins, Brett and Andrea Palmer, son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary K. Palmer of Provo.

Y Athletes Win Medals At Pan-Am

The United States' recent domination of the athletic competition in the Pan American Games in Winnipeg, Canada, is common knowledge. But several of the gold medals won by talented athletes from Brigham Young University is a story to be told.

YOUNG WRESTLERS

Former BYU wrestler, Mike Young, was the first among the BYU athletes to earn a first place medal. Young, a Western Athletic Conference champion while at BYU, won the 135-pound division race-off.

Said Young, "The most competitive part of the entire experience was in the Pan Am trials in Minneapolis against the other U.S. wrestlers."

When the U.S. clinched the volleyball gold medal in the fourth game of a best three-out-of-five set against the Brazilian volleyball team, the winning point was scored by former BYU basketball

USO 'Patriotic Service' Award Given Wilkinson

The certificate of appreciation and "The Man Who Came to Dinner" in 1964.

Gen. Kauflman said that in addition to the traveling shows which bring a touch of home to thousands of young Americans scattered throughout the world, the USO provides service clubs in many locations where military personnel are serving.

Dr. Hansen said the only drive for contribution to this activity in the Provo area is through the United Fund.

IMPORTANT CONTRIBUTION

Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, Jr., president of USO, in a letter from New York told Dr. Wilkinson: "I am extremely pleased to award your fine student touring group and their sponsoring department this expression of gratitude from the USO Board of Governors. These college groups have made a general and important contribution towards the morale of American men and women serving in overseas theaters around the world."

Under the direction of Dr. Hansen, BYU sent to the Orient the play "The Blythe Spirit" in 1966 for a five-day leadership conference beginning Friday, August 18.

The conference is the largest of its kind in the world and is being sponsored by the Mutual Improvement Association of the Church.

Explorers Hold Conference

More than 3,000 young men and adult leaders from over 250 lodges of the Explorers of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will converge on BYU campus for a five-day leadership conference beginning Friday, August 18.

Keep Your Eyes On The Road?

Alert Motorist Keeps His Eyes on the Move!

Some years ago it was considered sufficient for a driver simply to concentrate on his work of steering a car down the highway ... and, of course, "keep his eyes on the road." And to the inexperienced or "old fashioned" driver this still might sound like just the thing to do.

Concentrating and not taking your eyes off the road might seem like the way to avoid accident. But the Utah Safety Council points out that the driver who limits his watching activities to this bit of advice only can be setting himself up for a serious accident.

COULD BE TOO LATE

The idea, as presented by defensive driving experts, is to spot potential hazards in the traffic pattern well ahead of the point of no return. That is, the point past which it's too late for you to take evasive action.

Eyes must be on the move ... constantly. You look for the road picture far ahead. You scan from one side to the other, never letting your gaze linger longer than a second or two on any particular segment.

You look for an oncoming car pulling into your lane to pass. You look in intersections and side roads where a vehicle may be bearing down toward your intersection sections and side roads where a vehicle may be bearing down toward your path at an angle. Plan on these vehicles ignoring the traffic signs and signals ... and you get ready to take action if such hazard really develops.

Constant "flash backs" (glances at your mirrors in front) should also be used to reinforce them.

Keep your eyes on the road as early as possible. Can you really make the turn-left if you crossed over a right intersection? Or should you postpone a left turn because a fast-moving vehicle is closing up behind? A driver with "roving eyes" knows the answer to these questions because he's watching the big picture every second ... front, rear and to the sides.

Potential trouble spots develop quickly and the longer it takes

Industry's Pension Plans Don't Receive Tax Favoritism, Says NAM

Private pension plans are nothing to the pension plan is fair to the recipients of tax subsidies or from a subsidy. "Even with immediate vesting, the employee generally cannot withdraw the vested portion until retirement. Thus, our current tax-paying capacity is created," NAM noted.

In prepared commentary on a Congressional Joint Economic Committee staff report critical of private pension plans, entitled "Old Age Income Assurance: An Outline of Issues and Alternatives," NAM said that an employer's contribution to a pension fund is an "ordinary and necessary" business expense. "In determining the employee's net income subject to tax, it is immaterial to him whether the amount is paid as a pension contribution, or as wages. Such a deduction clearly is no more a tax incentive than is a deduction allowed for a wage payment," NAM asserted.

Similarly, NAM continued, taxing an employee only when he receives the employer's contribu-any particular employer or employees was also questioned by NAM.

In its conclusion, NAM remanded Congress that the original purpose of the Social Security System was to pay benefits to retired workers and their families. "It should retain its character as a basic public insurance system," NAM said.

SUGGEST EXPANSION

There are limits to the public's ability and desire to support continuous increases in the system, it continued. "If public and private plans are to co-exist and if the expansion of the Social Security System is approaching a level beyond which it would be wise to go, it would follow that the principal means in which old-age income assurance could be expanded is through private pension plans," the NAM statement concluded.

Major Foundations Give Over $572 Million to Education

Education received grants of $572 million last year from the nation's major foundations, the Russell Sage Foundation reported recently.

The total grants in 1966 by 6,200 foundations studied by itself and Sage Foundation came to $1.2 billion. Grants to education were slightly less than shown in a similar survey three years ago, but education still headed the list followed by welfare, international activities, health, sciences, religion and the humanities.

There was a considerable increase in grants for international affairs, but aid to the physical sciences, which have been heavily subsidized by Government agencies, dropped from $18 million to $8 million in the three years.

Among the largest educational grants were $10 million by the Ford Foundation to colleges and $5 million to the National Educational Television and Radio Center in New York; and $1.511, Columbia University for continuation by the Kellogg Foundation to ing education.

WORTH TALKING ABOUT

"In serving its community, each newspaper must bear to bear its own enterprise, courage, independence and integrity with whatever relative economic strength and journalistic resources it may have at its disposal. Thus, neither the size of a newspaper, its country or its community determines the relative measure of its effort or achievement."

MAKES TOTAL CONTRIBUTION

Rather it is its record of public service, pursuit of the truth, balance of presentation and specific contribution to the overall progress of the people of its area" — Robert L. Taylor, Publisher, Philadelphia Bulletin.

WHEW! IT'S BEEN A LONG HOT SUMMER! But this ferry boat in Chicago's Brookfield Zoo appears to be "keeping his cool" with giant cans of soft drinks supplied him by the Root Beer Institute. A little over 100 years ago, a Philadelphia pharmacist concocted the first "percolated blend of the juices of rare herbs, barks and berries" which he sold as a sort of spring tonic. Today, root beer is among the nation's top flavor favorites.

'Caravan' Shows U.S. To Foreign Tourists

Caravan America, a privately financed project for the betterment of relations between Americans and the people of other lands, is demonstrating that even a program with international aspects can be conducted effectively without the expenditure of taxpayers' funds.

This unique project, which is sponsored by the Willard Bryan Foundation of Bakersfield, Calif., a non-profit organization, makes automobiles and travel trailers available to foreign visitors for cross-country tours of the United States. This summer, French and French families are making such trips in caravan fashion.

FASHION CLEAR IMPRESSION

As explained by Mrs. Carolyn Bennett Patterson, chairman of the Foundation's board, the organization arranges for the use of the cars and trailers without cost to the foreign visitors "because of a strongly held conviction that this method of travel offers the surest and best means for them to acquire clear, well-rounded and lasting impressions of America and Americans."

"Trips of this people-to-people nature without the constraints that sometimes inhibit governmental involvement are essential to help erase misconceptions that may prevail abroad about our country and its citizens," she added.

As the caravans roll through grass-roots America, let's wave a hearty hello!

way and most of word in latter-day scripture are studied by Dr. Melvin J. Petersen, religion professor at one of two current research projects he is engaged in. His first project is a continuation of his thesis on revelation in the Old Testament which has done much to bring him to the world. He credits the world for use.

"A gift ought to direct us to the Giver, yet our mate'sistic instinct moves us farther away," says Dr. Petersen.

Dr. Petersen believes that instead of showing gratitude to Christ, people tend to repay His love by increased involvement in the world.

"It's like the pot indicating it is greater than the potter," adds Dr. Petersen. "Many people get their original source of their good fortune. These people feel they have achieved their position and prosperity by their own efforts."

When this occurs, "Man has no need to rely upon God or be grateful to him," says Dr. Petersen.

How can people avoid this pitfall? What can they do to overcome the various temptations plaguing mankind today? "The most important thing for us to do," says Dr. Petersen, "is to keep our eyes on the Prophet and not on the outside world."

In this manner of way, then, when I say we're responsible or surprised, it may sound like me attacking the Bible. In actuality, evolution is given its due. It's the people that are responsible for changing it. But, God has always known what His prophet speaks as a prophet. We learn this through revelation."

Dr. Petersen emphasized that every Mormon has the right to know what the Prophet speaks as a prophet. We learn this through revelation."

To Break A Bad Habit

If you've ever set out to try to break a bad habit, chances are you'd agree with an old Spanish proverb which says, "Habits are at first cobwebs, then cables."

But breaking a bad habit, or establishing a good one, may be easier for you if you try using some of the ideas in this story.

Once you decide to break a habit, don't wait to act on your resolution. No exception to the rule should be allowed until the old habit is broken. Faith, says a noted theorist, can often be helpful in breaking a bad habit, as can discussing the problem with a trusted friend or member of the family.

You may have better luck if you tackle one habit at a time. Behavioristic psychology and plain everyday common sense, compiled in hints you should make a habit of reading.

Hey, Muscles!

Yes, you. Regardless of your body build, muscle tissue account for over half your weight.

Obviously it's a good policy to treat your "better half" right by learning how to avoid muscle strain and what to do if it occurs. Some tips: it's easier to pull than to lift, push than to pull. Leg and thigh muscles are the strongest you have—let them take the brunt of heavy lifting by bending at the knees.

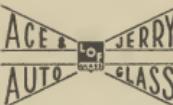

Poison is more important than you may think in determining whether or not your job makes you sore. If strain does occur, there's a tested way to lick that, too. The "inside" story of muscle care.
